IJUDA - Conflict of Interest Policy

The International Journal of Underwater Domain Awareness (IJUDA) is committed to ensuring the integrity, transparency, and impartiality of the editorial and peer-review process. To maintain the highest standards of publication ethics, authors, reviewers, and editors are required to disclose any actual, potential, or perceived conflicts of interest that could influence, or reasonably be perceived to influence, the conduct, evaluation, or publication of scholarly work.

Disclosure Requirements

All authors must disclose any financial, personal, professional, institutional, or non-financial relationships or interests that could affect the objectivity, integrity, or interpretation of their research.

Such interests include, but are not limited to:

- Employment or leadership positions;
- Consultancies or advisory roles;
- Stock ownership or equity interests;
- Honoraria or speaker fees; • Paid expert testimony;
- Patent applications, patents, or intellectual property interests;
- Research grants, sponsorships, or other sources of funding; and
- Personal relationships, academic competition, or other non-financial interests that may reasonably be perceived as influencing the research.

All relevant disclosures must be included in the manuscript at the time of submission. If no conflicts of interest exist, authors should include the statement: "The authors declare that they have no conflicts of interest."

Responsibilities of Editors

Editors must disclose any actual or potential conflicts of interest relating to a submitted manuscript, including financial interests, institutional affiliations, personal or professional relationships with the authors, or involvement in competing research. Editors with such conflicts must promptly recuse themselves from handling the manuscript, and another qualified editor will be assigned to ensure an impartial and independent review.

Responsibilities of Reviewers

Reviewers are expected to disclose any circumstances that may compromise, or appear to compromise, their ability to provide an objective and unbiased evaluation of a manuscript. Such circumstances may include personal or professional relationships with the authors, direct academic competition, financial interests, or involvement in related research. Reviewers who identify a conflict of interest must decline the review invitation or immediately notify the editorial office if the conflict becomes apparent after accepting the assignment.

Editorial Oversight

The Editorial Office reserves the right to request additional information regarding disclosed conflicts of interest and to take appropriate measures to safeguard the integrity of the editorial and peer-review process. Failure to disclose relevant conflicts of interest may result in the rejection of a manuscript, publication of a correction, retraction of a published article, or other actions in accordance with the journal's publication ethics policies.
